

Project Idea(s) Walkthrough

Main Ideas;

The main idea that the client had was focusing on things like a user-friendly experience where there is lots of imagery and hotlinks to simplify the user interface. Some of the main ideas we had was first reducing the number of drop-down options that were already on the website, and we plan on compressing it in a way that both simplifies and makes it more efficient to navigate between the numerous amounts of pages.

One idea that our team had was trying to focus more on was developing something that is more visually appealing by adding different shapes and images that can be cycled between on the landing page to make it look more exciting for the user. One of which ended up working quite well was the carousel image where the user could manually switch between the images themselves to discover cool events and general information about APSS and other things related to APSS.

Another idea that we settled one was removing the feedback at the bottom of the page, there wasn't any specific reason to keep it on there and the reviews themselves seemed quite one dimensional and didn't serve much purpose; not including the fact that the images slid past too fast to read the actual feedback section. With all this intact our group decided to keep the red/yellow color scheme of the website just as a placeholder until we would eventually decide on a new color that we haven't yet since it is still a low fidelity prototype. We also agreed that the AI imagery was quite bad and obviously removed that because it bothered both us and the client themselves, who had bad remarks about it.
